

Neptune's Children: Early Modern Waterways

24 May 2019 | Merton College, Oxford

What happens when we look at the world from the perspective of swamps, from lakes, from rivers; from the Indian Ocean, Mexico City, or the Firth of Forth?

How can we think better about early modern water, in a world in which water is once again a pressing political concern?

This conference together scholars of early modern Europe, India, and Latin America, who are historians, literary and legal specialists; and although Neptune fathers many of our watery discussions, we're expecting that the Aztec god Tlaloc might also talk back.

neptuneschildrenconference.wordpress.com

c • e • m • s
centre for early modern studies

Image: Salomon de Caus, 1615. 'Les raisons des forces mouuantes avec diuerses machines tant vtilles que plaisantes : aus quelles sont adioints plusieurs desseings de grotes et fontaines' A Francfort : En la boutique de Jan Norton